

Wisconsin's no call law has substantially improved my family's quality of life. Granting banks the right to make repeated calls for 18 months after cancellation of services would reduce that quality of life. If their request is granted, others will surely ask for similar privileges that will further reduce Wisconsin families' quality of life. I truly hope that in this instance, the FCC will rule in favor of ordinary American families.